THERE is something of a sensation in Talmadge, Ga. At a funeral, the other day, Rev. Borden Hayes, in the funeral sermon, said: "This poor man was a sinner; he did not repent, and now he is suffering the tortures of the damned. His body and soul are in flames that will never end." At this point the widow shuddered and cried out, but the preacher continued: "That is a hard thing to say to these mourners, but it is gospel truth. The husband and father is in hell." Several of those in attendance left the building, and some say they will never again listen to the preaching of the Rev. Hayes.

DR. TANNER is soon to begin his last in England. His coming trial is not to be a starve against him, but a contest (water against liquor). Tanner is to have competitors in the business, he drinking nothing but water, and they indulging in meat, fermented or spirituous beverages, any or all of them as they prefer. No food is to be taken. In regard to the trial, Tanner says:

They may select six men, as near my age and physical condition as possible. They can take wine, beer, or any spirituous liquor during the fast, and I will take water only, and see what the result will be. I am sure they can't stand it, and the reason is plain. When I fasted I lived on myself—the composition of my tissues. I lost half a pound a day in tissues. It was as nourishing to me as half a pound of any other animal tissue. Now, as I said, alcohol checks the decomposition of tissue. Suppose I'd taken alcohol into my system during my fast. I could have had my supply of nourishment, and I'd have started to decay.

THE SAME day the telegraph had so much to say concerning the landing in America of Sara Bernhardt, it conveyed the intelligence in a brief line that the widow of Abraham Lincoln had arrived from abroad. The two ladies crossed the Atlantic on the same ship, but how different were their welcomes. New York went mad over Mrs. Bernhardt, the wealth, beauty and a good deal of the brains showing respect that bordered upon reverence. The multitude jostled and surged and scrambled to get a glimpse of her, and fashion fairly bowed before her in homage. Amid the throng and excitement poor Mrs. Lincoln was hustled about and shoved aside as if she were nobody, never had been anybody, and was unworthy the ordinary consideration and respect that are everywhere shown her.

Her thoughts in that crowd must have been queer. She must have felt that this was a cold and heartless world. Only a few years ago she was the honored wife of the first person in the land. A nation worshiped her husband, and a smile or recognition from her was highly prized by the happy objects of her notice. If the mind of the poor lady were not already weakened, the exhibition that she witnessed upon reaching the land of her birth ten days ago, would have shattered it, and fairly driven her mad. Especially would she have suffered in her feelings that she realized that the woman to whom the country bowed, and in whose honor all that hubbub and demonstration was created, was devoid both of virtue and of respect for it in others; who would stoop to be called pure and good, and who prized not what to others of her sex is esteemed beyond price. Mrs. Lincoln may not have blushed for her countrymen, but she could with propriety have done so.

CAPTAIN EADS, of jetty fame, is more than in earnest in his scheme for transporting ships across the isthmus by rail. He is enthusiastic. He has gone to Tahuanepo for the purpose of making surveys and estimates of the cost of construction. If a man of less notoriety than Eads should put forward such a plan, we fear he would be promptly laughed into silence; but Captain Eads having done some things on a big scale, his scheme gathers a degree of respect and a little consideration on the part of engineers and thinking men. The last number to hand of the Scientific American illustrates and describes the proposed railway. The plan is to construct a marine railway for drawing the ships out of the water, when it could be transported across the country on a railway to comprise twelve tracks. The car for carrying the ship is to have 1,200 wheels of three feet in diameter, and powerful engines are to do the pulling. The ship would pass into the water on the other side over another marine railway. On paper it looks very pretty, and in print the feasibility of the plan is demonstrated to a nicety; but how it would work in practice is another thing. Eads claims that the cost of his railway would be much less than the cost of a canal across the isthmus; that the exact outlay can be ascertained before ground is broken; that ships could be moved much faster than through a canal, that the expense for carrying them would be less than the necessary canal tolls, and that altogether and in every way the railway would be preferable to a canal. If the distinguished gentleman can succeed in causing moneyed men to see through his eyes, and think with his mind, the practicability or impracticability of his plan may be tested one of these years.

CHRISTIANS will be pleased to know that the revised Bible is soon to make its appearance. It is now thought the New Testament will be out in February. The American Bible Revision Company has completed its work on the New Testament, which now has to be submitted to the English company, when the work of publishing will begin. It is said that numerous changes in the phraseology have been made; but the sense has been changed in but few instances. As no provision has been made for the payment of the American revisers, it has been proposed, and will probably be carried into effect, to remunerate them from the first sales of the new edition in this country. Dr. Schaaf also suggests that people who have the Bible each contribute $10 to meet the expenses of the revisers, the contributors to be each presented with a copy of the New Testament. Of course the new Bible will be much more costly for years to come than the version now in use, which is merely nominal in price. A high price is to be attached to the first edition, the idea being to pay the gentlemen who have spent so much time in the revision as soon as possible. It is thought that the people will be so eager to compare the new with the old, that an exorbitant price may be asked at the start, as large sales are certain. The Old Testament revision will not be completed before 1883.

THE MOREY HUNS.

Interminable Trash, Sent Out by Republican Press Agents.

Still Another Rebash of That State, Kansas Unprofitable Subject.

By Which the Republican Rogues Hope to Catch the Democratic Thieves.

New York, 11.—The case of James O'Brien, alias Lindsey, and S. S. Morey, charged with perjury, was before the grand jury of general sessions today. The indictment ordered for perjury against O'Brien and Morey was used as evidence, and they were sent to the house of detention as witnesses. Other and more important confessions are said to have been made, and arrests are expected to-morrow. The district attorney furnishes the press the confessions of Morey and O'Brien as far as can be made public without interfering with the course of justice.

The Times, last night, furnished the western press the substance of the confessions of Morey and O'Brien. The latter are of great interest, and are as follows: Morey, after stating that Clark and Sanborn, of Lawrence, Mass., in 1884, had been indicted for perjury, promising to stand by him and see him well paid, said: "Being strongly urged by Clark, I went to New York to see him, and only in regard to H. L. Morey was my testimony false; and also when I stated that I had been offered $100 by the republicans to come here to testify. My family record is in my pocket, and I know at the time it was a false statement. We went to the Truth office several times and had interviews with Joseph Hart and another man connected with the paper, whose name I do not know. We (Clark and I) arrived on the Saturday before the election. On Sunday morning we went down to the democratic headquarters. We first found only there, but some women cleaning up. We went then and got some breakfast and came back, and they kept waiting. I met a man by the name of Moore first, and then a number of others. He did not see Barnum. He had returned to Connecticut the evening previous. He was a man of about 40 years of age. I could tell his name if I heard it. Moore was sergeant-at-arms of the democratic committee there. They said I saw what I supposed was the secretary, the man that wrote and gave us the check. When we returned he was a man of about 40 years of age, and I was to give him when he got the check cashed. The $100 was for coming on, I suppose he didn't say what he was to get the $100. The men at the democratic headquarters said they could not have him out of their sight. They were afraid that little Davenport would get hold of him. I had several conversations with Hart, who declared that Morey had gone to Florida for his health. At the democratic headquarters they were liberal with the money, asking me to show them my pocket and paying $150, although the expense of both Clark and myself were less than $20. After getting home one Warner wanted me to go back to New York, asking if I was an object, but my wife and I agreed that it was too fatiguing a journey. Next Sunday night, however, Warner, Clark and I started for New York, registering in Boston under assumed names, and arriving at New York on Monday. We went direct to the Truth office and Hart directed us to go to the hotel and have the bills charged. They registered under false names. We went to the Truth office several times. On the way from Boston, Warner said we must keep our names secret. He said he would give me $10 and said I would be well paid for coming. I supposed he was from the Truth office.
